

It's just about that time

Written by Holyoke Enterprise

Fourth of July weekend usually is about the time farmers hit the fields and the first loads of wheat are cut. Rains over the holiday weekend put a halt on harvesting. Grainland Co-op grain merchandiser Steve Young said some test runs had been done but no wheat had been brought in as of Tuesday morning. He said it would depend on the weather in the upcoming days as to when farmers would get started. Wheat was standing tall in fields waiting to be harvested just like this crop two miles east of Holyoke Tuesday morning. —Enterprise photo
