Brittany Daniel graduated from Western Governor's University July 14 with her Master of Arts in teaching the social sciences. She received her bachelor's degree in history from Colorado State University in 2010.

After graduating from CSU, Daniel and husband Dylon moved to Holyoke. Soon after, Daniel decided to pursue her master's degree online. She conducted her student teaching at Sterling High School in the spring semester of 2012.

Daniel is now licensed in Colorado to teach social studies at the secondary level. She is currently a substitute teacher for Holyoke School District and hopes to be a full-time social studies teacher in northeastern Colorado.
