

Center pivot pivots the wrong way in the wind

Written by Holyoke Enterprise

This center pivot didn't fare too well in the weekend wind. Six of the eight towers blew over onto their side during the strong south wind. Jon Schneller owns the pivot and said it must have blown over Sunday night. He's not sure if a small micro burst played a part in blowing it over or not. The field is planted to corn, and he said they hope to get the pivot put back up soon. No other area damage was visible. The field is located seven miles east and five south of Holyoke.□□
